Qualifications

Please describe your relevant analytical skills.

My occupational history in the areas of medicine, community health practice, epidemiology, Alcohol and Drug Abuse, HIV/AIDS/STD management and research included the understanding of dense and technical written materials with associated analytical programs that evaluated the statistical validity and significance of collected data. Focus groups as well as community organization group input from mapped out areas along with participant testimony assisted in formulating survey questions appropriate for eliciting relevant information. Data and other factual information was researched and whenever needed was challenged to improve credibility. In cases of complex problem resolution, which involve factual ambiguities or conflicting claims on facts, an attempt to come to a consensus using available information occasionally resulted in collecting extra data to address specific issues. In addition, as part of a Health Department task force group during the Cooke administration, knowledge of standard legal process along with written legal policies and procedures were adhered to in order to develop health standards in the food service industry.

Please describe your ability to be impartial.

As a research coinvestigator for a national as well as a state heart study the goal of understanding a medical issue was accomplished by compiling information using experts in the field, record data extraction, focus groups, and community input. Collected data and other pertinent information generated statistical reports which were used to better define the issue being investigated. The use of scaling information to provide a numerical value was used to weight a variety of issues. Since the goal of any study is to understand the problem first then apply collected information and facts to generate possible changes, knowledge of legal nature was imperative before any action could be taken. As an example, I was a member of an Austin Health Department Task Force whose mission was to produce a report along with a city wide plan to improve health issues in the food service industry.

Please describe your appreciation for the City of Austin's diverse demographics and geography.

My occupation and academic career has allowed me to serve the public without prejudice or bias to personal interest, political opinions or group allegiances. I do not have personal, family, financial relationships, commitments or aspirations that a reasonable person would consider likely to improperly influence someone making a redistricting commission. I have served on a variety of boards including the Austin Community Foundation, Caritas clinic, Austin Restaurant Association, and San Jose Church Finance Committee.

Please provide any other information you wish to be considered during the selection of the most qualified applicants for the Commission.

I have worked with a diverse group of people who have a variety of issues that impact not only themselves but also the community. I was clinical director of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse program at the Healing Grounds for the Kickapoo Indians in Eagle Pass, Texas. Our goal was to generate a plan for the Council and put into effect a program to reduce the use and abuse of alcohol and drugs in and out of the reservation. Also both National and State federal grants mentioned above were to study the effects of certain heart issues among Hispanics in the Corpus Christi, Texas area. This involved medical records searches along with person interviews for data collection and ultimately analysis for reports that were used to better define the effects on minority populations. In addition, as a group manager for the State of Texas HIV/AIDS/STD surveillance program, a clear understanding of the demographic characteristics including race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, economic status, as well as place of residence was crucial for inclusiveness in forming policies that affect those at risk.
